

Kevin D. Kelly
Americas Director, People
Ernst & Young LLP

Kevin Kelly oversees Human Resources Strategy and Operations for Ernst & Young's Americas People Team and works with leadership to drive its commitment to a "People First" culture and achievement of its business goals. Through "People First," the firm commits to attract, grow, and motivate all its people through a flexible and inclusive culture.

Kevin has 28 years of experience in the human resources field. He joined Ernst & Young's Los Angeles office in 1989 and has held progressively more responsible HR roles culminating with his move to New York for his current position. He became part of the Americas HR Leadership Team in early 2001 focusing on transforming the 33 loosely connected HR departments into a single Americas People Team with a new model delivering better support and service to employees in 29 countries comprising the Americas Area.

Kevin is also a member of Ernst & Young's Global Human Resources Committee, which provides input to global people priorities and initiatives.

Kevin earned his B.S. in Psychology from the University of California at Los Angeles. He lives in Chappaqua, N.Y., with his wife Marian and has three children: Carmeron, Kalene, and Mackenzie.